

Representation to Exeter City Licensing Committee

I am writing [REDACTED], which is copied below for ease of reference.

[REDACTED], I would like to add my concern that drunk people staggering along the Quay and falling into the water are likely to drown. I watched one such person earlier this year, who came perilously close to falling in one evening, and thought then how dangerous it was to have the off-sales of alcohol on the Quay during the lockdown. I have never before seen such appalling behaviour on the Quay as I saw this year. The Quay is not a suitable place for a takeaway outlet, either of food or alcohol.

We also have many students in Exeter who would be familiar with the culture of Ganbei, and I have no desire to see any instances of young people drowning because thought has not been given to this serious potential consequence of endorsing and encouraging unlimited, rapid consumption of alcohol.
